

African American Museum Purposes

The African American people are people who have so many abilities, strong determination, and great struggle. If we look backward, we can find so many African American public figures that have so much contribution to the society and the country from Martin Luther King Jr to Maya Angelou with her literature. To honor the African American people, the United State government builds African American Museum in several states such as Philadelphia and Texas. Not only The African American Museum on each state was built for honor African American people, but also it is used as a center of African American identification, study center, presentation, and many other beneficial activities.

The African American Museum is purposed to be an institution that gives cultural representation of African American culture, lifestyle, and value. The African American Museum is also built to be a media to educate people, so they will get good understanding on African American history, growth, development, and experience. The African American Museum is also hopped to be the center of African American art and literature. There is so much knowledge that we can get by visiting this museum because all the information on the museum becomes the part of American culture, our culture. On the African American Museum, we will be assisted with the guide that will give us complete information we need.
